North Dakota Department of Emergency Services Considerations

Explanation of Studies

The North Dakota Department of Emergency Services (ND DES) issued Homeland Security grants to Cass County, Burleigh County, Ward County, and Grand Forks County to conduct a series of studies. The purpose of the studies was to assess community leader and first responder levels of acceptance for an anchor community concept and the establishment and acceptance of baseline equipment lists for first responders in North Dakota. “Anchor Community” was defined as “ a community that facilitates statewide sharing of resources necessary to prevent and respond to a chemical, biological, radiological , nuclear and explosive (CBRNE) incident to include personnel, equipment, training, exercises and planning. “Baseline equipment” was defined as “the minimum equipment necessary to respond effectively to a CBRNE incident based on Department of Homeland Security response levels”.

Grand Forks, Burleigh, and Ward counties collectively agreed to pool grant resources for a combined multi-jurisdictional approach to the anchor community study. Cass County opted to pursue the study on a single county by county assessment in the southeastern section of ND based on involvement with previous studies related to regional response.

Studies on a multi-county level were conducted through the Association of Counties and League of Cities by Joel Rostberg. Singular county studies were researched by Kym Overland, Cass-Fargo Emergency Services Coordinator.

Statement of Relevance

North Dakota is characterized by many as a sparsely populated non-vulnerable state. One might assume this sparse habitat is of small significance to terrorists or elements prone to violence to intimidate or coerce a government or civilian population in furtherance of political or social objectives. Upon examination the opposite is apparent; North Dakota has a myriad of attractants to dissident elements. Home of the International Peace Gardens and vast reaches of accessible border with Canada, the region offers proximity to transient terrorist elements. Major power generation plants and massive earth filled dams dot the state, with little or no security protocol. Vast herds of cattle and endless fields of grain provide food and sustenance to countless Americans. Large gatherings in America's heartland of international groups provide an environment susceptible to terrorist acts. The region is crisscrossed with major rail and road transportation routes transporting tons of hazardous materials. Finally, North Dakota has a history with domestic terrorism with documented activity of Posse Comitatus.

Despite the overpowering evidence of vulnerability and threat, current Homeland Security policy and direction has diverted mass quantities of federal funding for initiatives in urban America. This diversion of funding from North Dakota has significantly impacted the state's ability to protect its population through the North Dakota State Homeland Security Strategy. New federal Homeland Security guidance requires "all levels of government embrace a regional approach to building capabilities".

Recognizing current Homeland Security funding trends and federal program guidance North Dakota has embarked on a strategic direction to leverage future funding in a focused manner through strategic placement of resources and tiered application of response equipment. North Dakota's direction is contingent on the acceptance of these concepts by community leaders and first responders.

North Dakota's anchor community and baseline equipment studies examine the acceptance of strategically placed funding for shared response capability (anchor community concept) and a recommended acceptance of a baseline equipment list for first responders. Additionally, the studies provide the information necessary to aid North Dakota with recommendations for future action on building anchor communities and refinement of tiered equipment lists. This information will set the stage for a strategic direction in adjusting to current funding reductions while achieving Homeland Security for its populace.

Anchor Community Study Problem

North Dakota faces serious challenges in implementing an effective Homeland Security strategy to ensure efficient and effective prevention, protection, response, and recovery to a chemical, biological, radiological, nuclear, or explosive (CBRNE) incident. North Dakota is currently experiencing drastic funding decreases in the Homeland Security Program. In FY 2005, North Dakota's allocation for the State Homeland Security Program (SHSP), Law Enforcement Terrorism Prevention Program (LETPP), Citizen Corps, and the Emergency Management Performance Grant (EMPG) amounted to $12,849,748; a reduction of $6,571,252 or 34 percent from the previous fiscal year. A reduction of this magnitude in the U.S. Department of Homeland Security (DHS) funding will severely limit North Dakota's resources available for prevention and response activities designed to protect people from terrorist attacks. To add to this problem, further reductions in Homeland Security funding are predicted to occur in future funding cycles.

Independent attitudes are often necessary to survival in a rural environment; however, they often foster a lack of cooperation when cooperation is necessary to create efficient use of available resources. Local control is a political ideal held sacred in North Dakota. The state's past funding cycle has allocated funding through county emergency managers utilizing specific work groups for funding allocation decisions. This effort, though politically acceptable to local government, is not conducive to a decreased funding allocation. The current formula for distributing Homeland Security funding, in North Dakota, does not allow for maximum resource distribution. In the past, a key element in preventing the implementation of a tiered prevention and response capability has been a lack of support from stakeholders. Stakeholders perceive Homeland Security funding as fiscal augmentation of existing services. They do not perceive additional service, provided from larger departments, as a benefit.

Additionally, the agricultural economy has eroded human and financial resources to a point where rural areas have begun consolidating. In addition, an aging population and out-of-state population migration has produced shortages of emergency response personnel. Volunteer departments are finding it difficult to keep up with the requirements associated with receiving Homeland Security funding. Funding becomes an issue when communities need to plan for the maintenance of equipment purchased through the Homeland Security grants. In some instances, small communities are beginning to realize continued existence will require a transition toward human, equipment, and financial resource sharing.

Purpose

The anchor community study was designed to examine, through stakeholder input, the level of acceptance for a statewide regional approach based upon community resource sharing. This would ensure a tiered capability to effectively and efficiently prevent and respond to a CBRNE event. As ND DES begins looking at the possibility of establishing anchor communities, stakeholders need to be involved in the process. That involvement occurred through a series of focus groups to offer participants a forum for constructive input. The results of the study will be distributed to first responders and community leaders throughout the state. Further, the results of the study will be presented to the ND DES Advisory Board as they discuss long-range, Homeland Security plans. The board will determine the feasibility of planning and implementing this type of regional resource sharing approach throughout North Dakota.

Method

Recognizing the future decreases in Homeland Security funding and changing program initiatives, ND DES convened an internal planning group to scope the problem. The planning group consisted of representatives from the Department of Homeland Security, N.D. Highway Patrol, N.D. Bureau of Criminal Investigation (BCI), and ND DES. That meeting launched the anchor community and baseline equipment study concepts. The ND DES briefed these initiatives to local emergency managers at the ND DES Annual Workshop and again during the Homeland Security grant applicant briefings. Recognizing the importance of independent attitudinal review, ND DES arranged for contractors to conduct the studies. In an effort to ensure both multi-county and single county attitudes, ND DES segregated the studies into two methods. The difference in focus groups was to examine whether there was a variation in attitudes or feelings in a single county setting versus a multi-county setting.

In gathering information, contractors attended regional emergency management meetings to explain the study, importance of participation, and to answer any questions. Letters explaining the study were sent out to possible participants around the state. Contractors worked with local emergency managers to determine the best time to schedule focus groups to ensure maximum participation. Evenings were determined to be the best time since the majority of participants are volunteers. Stutsman and Cass Counties opted to hold their focus groups in the afternoon since there was a mixture of full time and volunteer participants. Potential participants were chosen based on the response disciplines put forth by the Department of Homeland Security: Fire/Hazmat, Law Enforcement, Healthcare, Public Health, Emergency Management, Administration, Public Works, Public Safety Communications, Emergency Medical Services, etc. Representatives from each discipline at the county, city, and tribal levels were invited to participate. Invites were sent out approximately two weeks prior to the focus groups; 1,675 invites were sent out.

Seventeen focus groups were conducted throughout the state with participants from a variety of disciplines. Joel Rostberg conducted six multi-county focus groups in the Northeast (Grand Forks, Devil's Lake), Northwest (Minot, Williston), and Southwest (Bismarck, Dickinson) corners of the state. Kym Overland conducted eleven (Barnes, Sargent, Lamoure, Stutsman, Richland, McIntosh, Traill, Ransom, Logan, Steele, and Cass Counties) focus groups in eleven of the 13 counties in the Southeast corner of the state. Two of the thirteen counties had emergencies preventing them from participating in the discussions. The same presentation, questions, and questionnaires were used in each focus group. The focus groups began with a power point presentation that explained the following: purpose of the study, the definition of anchor communities, the correlation between the universal task list and the anchor community concept, an explanation of the WMD response level definitions, and finally the roles and responsibilities of the anchor community concept. Following the presentation, the focus group discussions took place.

The focus group questions are as follows:

- Q1) With systems set up as they currently are; what are the gaps you see in response to a Homeland Security (CBRNE) event?*
- Q2) How can an anchor community system fill the identified gaps?*
- Q3) Do you think a system for sharing resources would benefit your jurisdiction?*
- Q4) What level of response (resources) would define an anchor community?*
- Q5a) How would you set up a statewide anchor community system?*
- Q5b) What would be the criteria for selecting an anchor community?*
- Q6) What response time parameters would be acceptable?*

To compile the information gathered, contractors read through all of the responses from the focus groups. Researchers read through all of the information, question by question to pull out the common themes addressed at each focus group. Those themes are explained in the results section.

Following the focus groups, participants were asked to complete a questionnaire. The following questions used a Likert scale ranging from, strongly agree to strongly disagree:

- Q1) Anchor communities will accommodate sharing of human resources.*
- Q2) Anchor communities will accommodate sharing of equipment resources.*
- Q3) Anchor communities would accommodate a more efficient method of equipment distribution.*
- Q4) Anchor communities will benefit our jurisdiction in a CBRNE event.*
- Q5) Anchor communities will enable us to plan more effectively for a response to a CBRNE event with other jurisdictions.*
- Q6) Anchor communities will accommodate the formulation of a comprehensive statewide Homeland Security strategic plan.*
- Q7) Anchor communities will benefit my discipline (e.g. Fire, Law, EMS, Public Health, etc.).*
- Q8) Anchor communities will benefit my local community.*

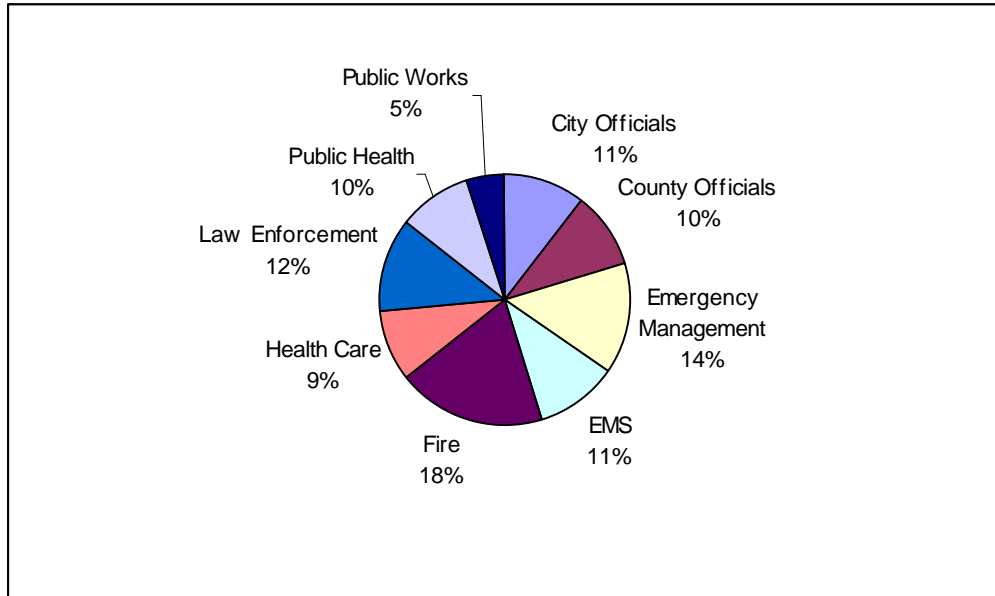

The participants were also asked the following demographic questions:

- Q9) What is your primary discipline?*
- Q10) What is your secondary discipline?*
- Q11) What is your community's current level of WMD response capability?*
- Q12) What size is your discipline/department?*
- Q13) Are there specialty teams (e.g. SWAT, HazMat, Bomb Squad, Decontamination) in your jurisdiction?*
- Q13b) If yes, please indicate what type(s):*

Results

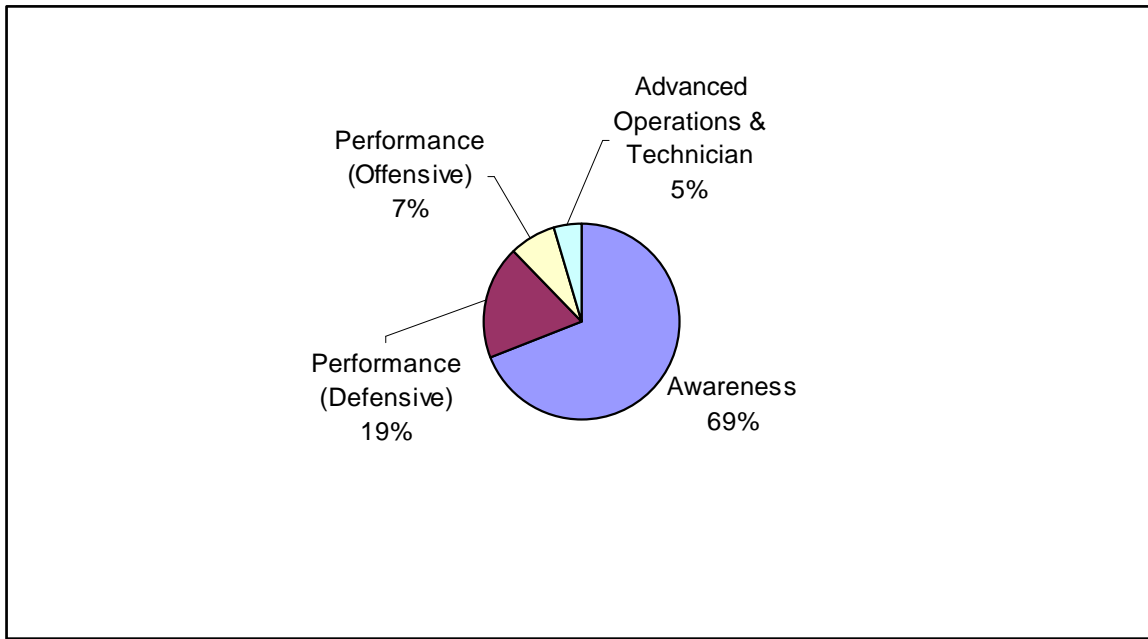

After compiling the information, researchers discovered there was no significant difference from the multi-county and single county focus groups. Participants in the study, from all over N.D., had many of the same comments and discussions, in relation to the anchor community concept. Following are the results broken down as follows; demographics, focus group results, and the questionnaire results.

Demographics

The above pie chart shows the breakdown of attendees at the focus groups. As stated in the method section, 1,675 invitations were sent out to potential focus group participants. The invitees included representatives from city, county, and tribal government, fire/hazmat, law enforcement (special operations), EMS, healthcare, public health, public works, and emergency management. Of those invited, 228 individuals attended the focus groups.

The following chart depicts the focus group participants' understanding of their jurisdictions' WMD response level. Some participants may have viewed their jurisdiction as their city and others viewed their jurisdiction as their county depending on the jurisdiction they serve.

Focus Group Results

Focus groups took place in the evenings from June 22 through July 13. As mentioned previously, there was no significant difference between the multi-county focus groups or the single county focus groups. Below are the questions from the focus groups with the most common responses detailed.

Q1) With systems set up as they currently are, what are the gaps you see in response to a Homeland Security (CBRNE) event?

The most common gap identified in response to a Homeland Security event is in a lack of personnel, equipment, and funding to respond to a large incident, especially those in the rural areas and involving hazardous materials. Many of these rural areas feel that the wait is too long when asking for assistance from the state. Jurisdictions feel that calling the state for assistance should be similar to citizens calling 911; they should be able to explain the problem and then the state should be able to send what they need.

Many responders mentioned the “red tape” they need to go through when requesting resources. They would like a more streamlined request process, where they do not need to worry about getting signatures and having previously signed agreements. Responders also expressed that it would be helpful to know what resources currently exist, and where they are, in North Dakota. Also, along the lines of a statewide response, is the confusion on who handles the logistical efforts when there are multiple response agencies responding. Questions and issues discussed included: Who handles the food and lodging for the out-of-town responders? Who pays the salaries of the out of town responders? When larger communities are responding to the rural areas, will their costs be reimbursed?

Other funding issues were also discussed. There is concern that since updating the radio systems in North Dakota has been addressed, there has been a lack of organization or a plan in distributing Homeland Security funding throughout the state. Some jurisdictions feel there is no guidance when they are given money and that the money is being “thrown out helter-skelter”. Several responders expressed concern that the EMS discipline is being left out of the funding distribution. During several of the focus groups, the discussion centered on the lack of support for EMS response, specifically in the area of hospital evacuation.

Another gap that was identified was the lack of reception in the rural areas in terms of cell phones and radios. In many instances, there is absolutely no reception and in others, the clarity is poor. Another issue in relation to communications is that not all frequencies are available when traveling around the state. In some jurisdictions, the state radio channel is unavailable, so responders must resort to using cell phones; if there is service.

Q2) How can an anchor community system fill the identified gaps?

The majority of respondents expressed that an anchor community system would help with sharing of resources. The responders felt that it could be highly beneficial if the anchor community concept would eliminate the “red tape” or reduce the amount of paperwork that goes with requesting assistance from other jurisdictions. They felt that having a regional system, where the teams weren’t necessarily based in the four largest communities, but perhaps eight communities, would also be beneficial. The majority of the focus groups discussed having a tiered level response, with the four largest communities (Bismarck, Fargo, Grand Forks, and Minot) at the higher response capability levels, and at least four additional communities (Dickinson, Devils Lake, Jamestown, and Williston) at the performance defensive level. They felt that this would be the most efficient way to spread out the resources and have a more timely response throughout the state.

The respondents discussed that having a tiered, regional response system would help to create a database of resources available in the state. Rural jurisdictions expressed that it would be very helpful to know which resources were available and where. EMS explained that a tiered, regional response system would be the only way they could respond to a large incident in the state. A majority of the rural responders expressed concern that the regional system could create “haves” and “have nots”. They recognize the necessity of having resources available to assist them in their response, but expressed that they also need to keep receiving Homeland Security funding in order to be able to respond themselves.

Q3) Do you think a system for sharing resources would benefit your jurisdiction?

The majority of responders stated that yes an anchor community system would benefit their jurisdictions. They expressed that this could help cut down on the confusion of who they should contact when assistance is needed. Larger jurisdictions expressed that the anchor community system would be beneficial to the state, if the communities were funded up front, in terms of equipment and training, and they received reimbursement for response.

Q4) What level of response (resources) would define an anchor community?

First and foremost, the responders felt that the communities would need to have the willingness and the commitment to being an anchor community. It would need to be a coordinated system throughout the state, not just one community available to respond. Responders felt that a WMD response level of performance offensive or advanced operations and technician capability, from full-time departments, would be necessary to ensure a response to a CBRNE event. As mentioned previously, responders around the state felt that a tiered system would be the most beneficial way to set up a regional response. In terms of medical, it was felt that anchor communities should have a hospital and their EMS capability should be advanced life support (ALS).

Q5a) How would you set up a statewide anchor community system?

The majority of responders felt that the tiered response system that the state discussed a few years ago was a good idea. The four larger communities (Bismarck, Fargo, Grand Forks, and Minot) should be at least at the performance offensive or advanced operations and technician level, with at least four communities (Devils Lake, Dickinson, Jamestown, and Williston) at the performance defensive level. Several groups mentioned that the anchor community system should follow the example of the statewide SWAT response that was recently worked out. Responders also like the idea of being able to call upon the anchor communities themselves rather than going through the ND DES and State Radio.

Responders felt very strongly that the anchor communities would need to train and exercise with the smaller jurisdictions. They expressed that communities that are defined as an anchor community need to have regional exercises to ensure they are prepared to work with those communities and that those communities are prepared to work with them. Volunteers also expressed that the anchor communities should be required to travel out into the state to train and exercise with the receiving jurisdictions. They expressed that being volunteers makes it very difficult to travel in order to train and exercise.

Q5b) What would be the criteria for selecting an anchor community?

Responders felt that there are existing capabilities around the state that should be utilized in the anchor community system. Responders also felt strongly that if the anchor community system is set up that it needs to be able to sustain if the Homeland Security funding runs out. As mentioned previously, the anchor communities would need to have the willingness and the commitment to being an anchor community. Anchor communities should also have a local operational 911 system.

Q6) What response time parameters would be acceptable?

One to two hours was the most common time period given as acceptable. Several of the jurisdictions, expressed that the initial or “evaluation team” should be able to respond within an hour. In talking with the larger communities, it was expressed that they could be on the road and headed out of town within 15-30 minutes, depending on the incident.

Questionnaire Results

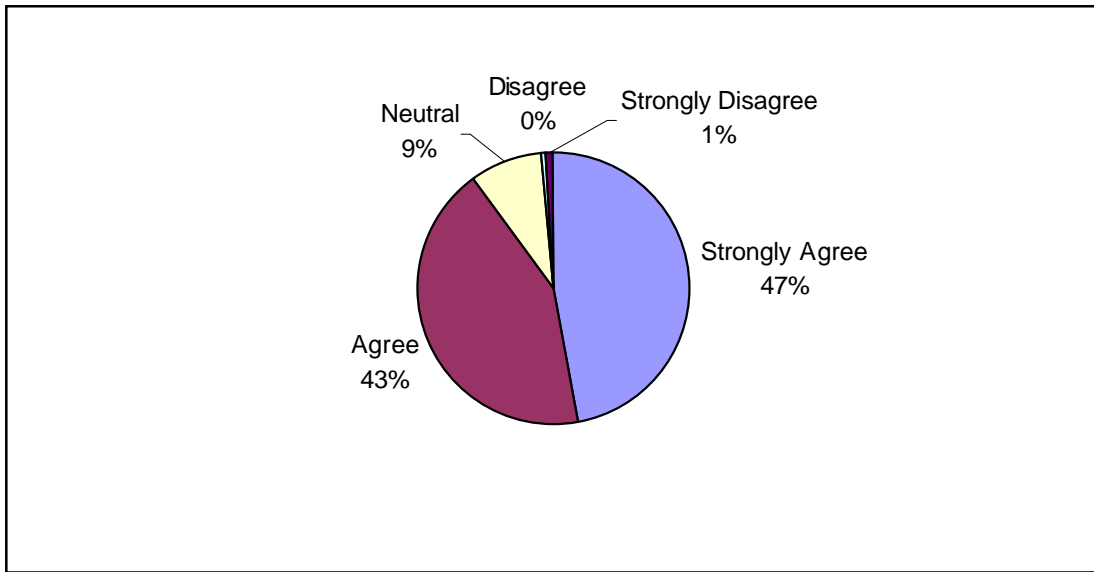

Immediately following the focus group discussion, respondents were given the opportunity to respond with additional comments or questions before responding to the following questions in the form of a questionnaire.

Q1) Anchor communities will accommodate sharing of human resources.

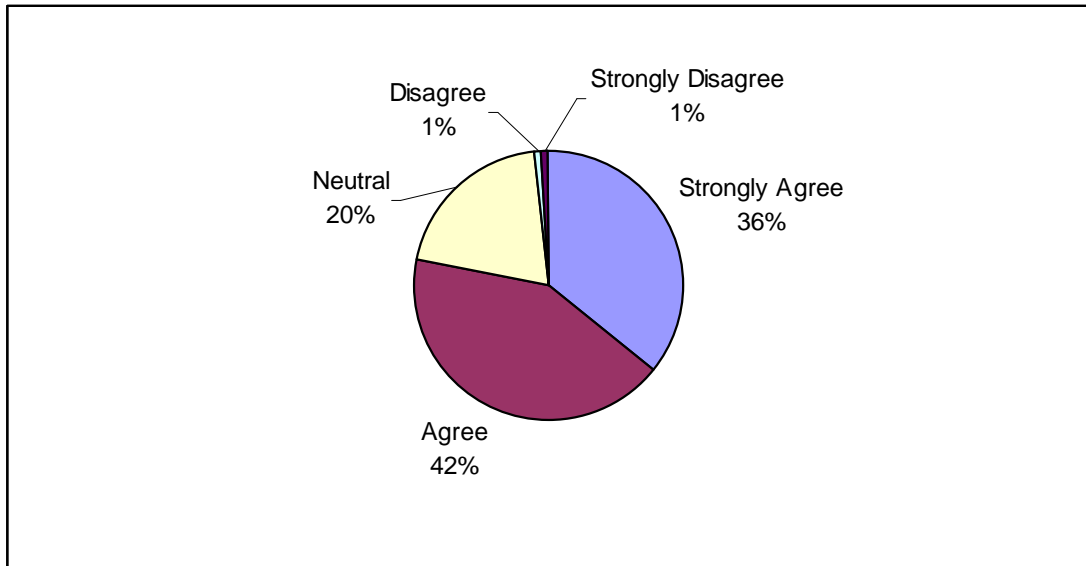

Ninety percent of the respondents agreed or strongly agreed that anchor communities would accommodate sharing of human resources. Only two percent felt negatively regarding anchor communities accommodating sharing of human resources.

Q2) Anchor communities will accommodate sharing of equipment resources.

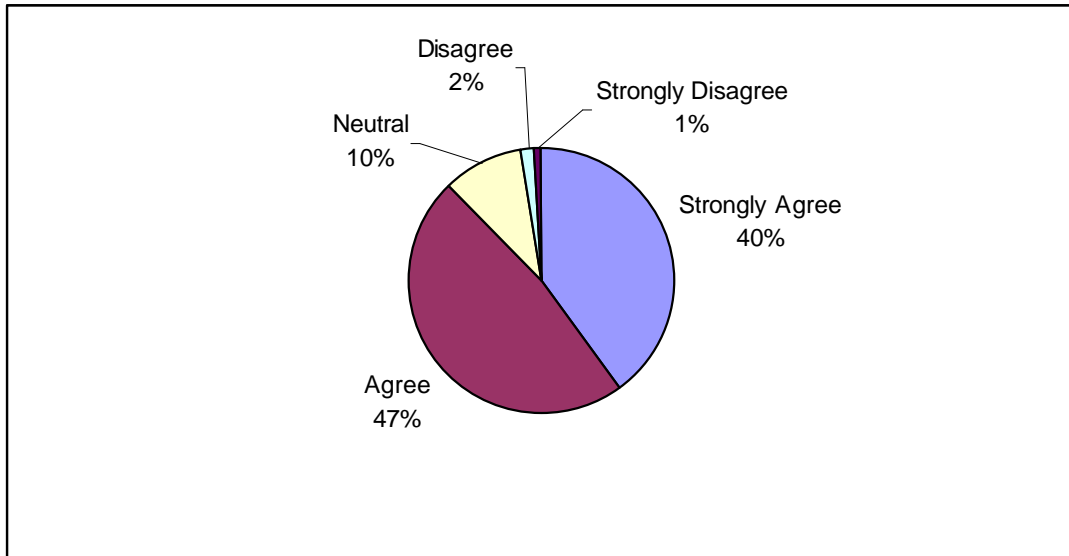

The majority of respondents, 90 percent, strongly agreed or agreed that anchor communities will accommodate sharing of equipment resources. Only one percent strongly disagreed and nine percent were unsure or neutral in regards to anchor communities accommodating sharing of equipment resources.

Q3) Anchor communities would accommodate a more efficient method of equipment distribution.

When asked if anchor communities would accommodate a more efficient method of equipment distribution, again the majority agreed or strongly disagreed, 78 percent. Only two percent disagreed or strongly disagreed and 20 percent felt neutrally about anchor communities accommodating a more efficient method of equipment distribution.

Q4) Anchor communities will benefit our jurisdiction in a CBRNE event.

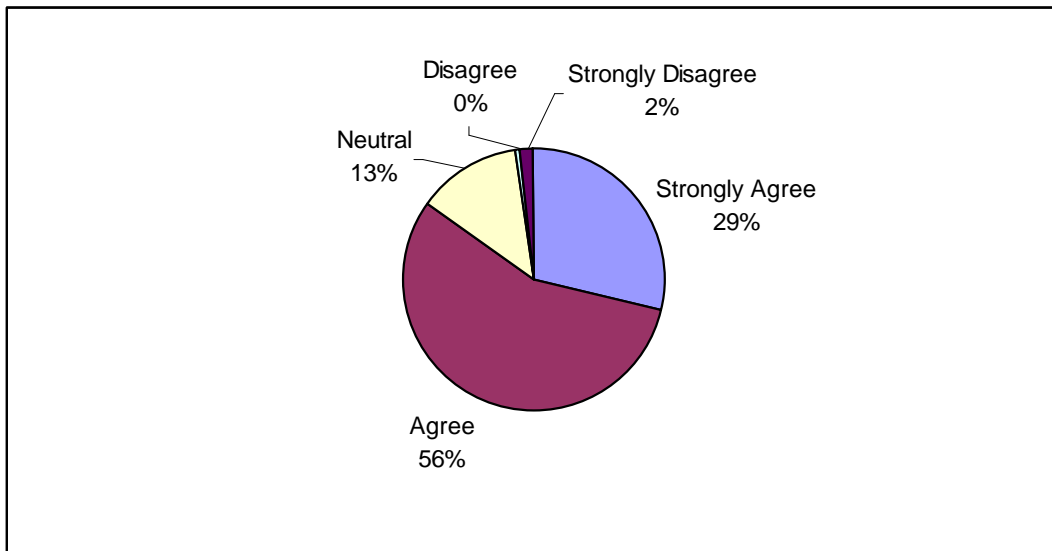

Eighty-seven percent of the respondents felt that anchor communities will benefit their jurisdiction in a CBRNE event. With the majority of 47 percent agreeing and 40 percent strongly agreeing. Only three percent disagreed or strongly disagreed and 10 percent felt neutrally.

Q5) Anchor communities will enable us to plan more effectively for a response to a CBRNE event with other jurisdictions.

Regarding anchor communities enabling jurisdictions to plan more effectively for a response to a CBRNE event with other jurisdictions, a strong majority, 87 percent, agreed or strongly agreed. Eleven percent felt neutrally with only two percent disagreeing or strongly disagreeing.

Q6) Anchor communities will accommodate the formulation of a comprehensive statewide Homeland Security strategic plan.

Again, the majority of responders, 85 percent, agreed or strongly agreed that anchor communities will accommodated the formulation of a comprehensive statewide Homeland Security strategic plan. Only 13 percent felt neutrally and only two percent strongly disagreed.

Q7) Anchor communities will benefit my discipline (e.g. Fire, Law, EMS, Public Health, etc.).

The majority of respondents, 47 percent, agreed that anchor communities will benefit their discipline and a close second, 34 percent of respondents, strongly agreed. Only one percent of respondents strongly disagreed and four percent disagreed. The remaining 14 percent felt neutral.

Q8) Anchor communities will benefit my local community.

A large majority of respondents, 85 percent, agreed or strongly agreed that anchor communities will benefit their local community. Only three percent disagreed or strongly disagreed and 12 percent felt neutrally.

Summary and Conclusion of Anchor Community Study

The general consensus around the state is that there is support for implementing a tiered, anchor community response system. The results of the questionnaire supported the results of the focus group discussion, that responders around the state are in support of implementing some type of anchor community system. Many jurisdictions feel the model the state developed in 2001 should be used and implemented following the SWAT model implemented this year with law enforcement. According to the discussion, the tiered system should be set up with Bismarck, Fargo, Grand Forks, and Minot at WMD response levels of performance offensive and advanced operations and technician and at least the four communities of Devils Lake, Dickinson, Jamestown, and Williston at WMD response level performance defensive. Rural jurisdictions expressed that they need to continue receiving Homeland Security funding and are concerned this would cease with the implementation of anchor communities. The larger communities expressed that without more support in Homeland Security funding, to fund the planning, equipment, training, exercising and reimburse the response; there cannot be an anchor community system.

If the anchor community concept is implemented, jurisdictions feel that they should be able to request the assistance of the anchor communities without going through State Radio. Responders were unanimous in their feeling that minimum response time from an anchor community should be no more than two hours. Finally, jurisdictions felt very strongly that anchor communities need to train and exercise with the receiving communities.

Baseline Equipment Study

Problem

Homeland Security funding initiatives, beginning with Department of Justice equipment programs, in 1999, have relied on an authorized equipment list of qualifying equipment for terrorism response. The list has evolved from a categorical dropdown list of less than 50 items to a complex web-based system containing hundreds of qualifying items. Some small, volunteer departments do not have the expertise or the time to fully research all equipment options available for procurement. Additionally, North Dakota has received numerous requests from departments for guidance on what to purchase. The DHS authorized equipment list has not provided a specific list of equipment that directly correlates to the to different capability levels within various response disciplines. Currently, choice of equipment is often a “wish list”, which has been responsible for the claims that the Homeland Security Grant Program has resulted in “toys for boys” and a sense of entitlement when purchasing equipment. Reduced Homeland Security Grant money, will further compound the equipment purchases in North Dakota.

National initiatives are currently pursuing a similar effort through the development of a Universal Task List and Target Capabilities List based on a series of national planning scenarios. The effort will eventually link specific equipment by WMD response level. This initiative, though logical, does not ground product with local first responders, the backbone of response in North Dakota.

Purpose

The baseline equipment study was designed to establish, through local expertise, a recommended baseline equipment list for first responders by discipline and WMD response level. Aligning equipment with capability will promote consistency, efficiency, and effectiveness.

Having baseline equipment lists will aid responders to identify what equipment they need at their response levels and areas in which they may need assistance. When introduced into a tiered regional model, it will achieve an economy of scale for jurisdictional response never experienced before in North Dakota.

Method

Local jurisdictions have been requesting a simplified equipment list to utilize when deciding how to spend their Homeland Security allocations. Recommendations have been made to ND DES to compile a list by discipline and also by WMD response level. To complete this baseline equipment list, contractors worked with subject matter experts (SMEs) in each of the disciplines as specified by the Department of Homeland Security. Subject matter experts were chosen from all over the state. The following chart depicts the discipline SMEs and the contractor they worked with to develop the baseline equipment lists.

Discipline	Subject Matter Expert	Coordinating Contractor
Agriculture	Deidre Qual	Wayne Baron
EM/Admin.	Jim Campbell/Joe Simon (Grand Forks)	Kym Overland
EMS	Dean Lampe (Bismarck)	Joel Rostberg
Fire/Hazmat	Tim Beach (Minot)	Kym Overland
	Rob Wilson (Fargo)
Health Care	Karen Haskins (Bismarck)	Joel Rostberg
Law Enforcement	Duffy Heinle (Bismarck)	Joel Rostberg
Public Health	Jim Hausauer (Fargo)/ Tami Dillman (Jamestown)	Kym Overland
Public Works	Keith Hunke (Bismarck)	Joel Rostberg
911 Communications	Jerry Bergquist (Jamestown)	Kym Overland

Contractors met with the respective SMEs to explain the baseline equipment study. To complete the lists, certain documents needed to be considered: the 2005 DHS Authorized Equipment List (AEL), the DHS Universal Task List (UTL), the DHS Target Capabilities

List (TCL), the DHS WMD Response Level Definitions, and any other documents related to the use of equipment for the various disciplines.

All equipment purchased using Homeland Security funding must be on the AEL or is not an allowable expense. According to DHS, “the UTL includes tasks required to prevent an incident from occurring, plan a response, prepare and train to respond effectively, and execute a response.” “The TCL is designed to assist jurisdictions and agencies in understanding and defining their respective roles in a major event, the capabilities required to perform a specified set of tasks, and where to obtain additional resources if needed”. Due to time constraints, contractors and SMEs only focused on the equipment needed to respond. The other areas will be looked at in future studies. The Fire and Hazmat SMEs also used National Fire Protection Association (NFPA) Standards which included:

NFPA 471, “Responding to Hazmat Incidents”

NFPA 472, “Professional Competence of Hazmat Responders”

NFPA 1991, “Vapor Protective PPE for Hazmat Response”

NFPA 1994, “PPE for Chem/Bio Terrorist Incidents”

NFPA 1999, “PPE for Emergency Medical Operations”

NFPA 1670, “Operations & Training for Technical Rescue Incidents”

Once draft baseline equipment lists were put together, these lists were vetted through a series of actions, including but not limited too, review by specific discipline committees and distributed to membership bases. Upon receipt of recommendations, ND DES will make those changes to baseline equipment lists. This list is not meant to be the definitive cadre of equipment; it is the first step in helping jurisdictions wade through the exhaustive list of equipment provided by DHS. These baseline equipment lists will be continuously updated.

BASELINE EQUIPMENT STUDY CLARIFICATION

The attached baseline equipment lists have been compiled by discipline based expertise. The lists should be viewed as initial recommendations for first responders based on Department of Homeland Security performance levels. The publication of the lists is not intended to restrict response disciplines from requesting equipment currently listed on the DHS “Authorized Equipment List”.

The lists should be viewed as a “work in progress” which will be adjusted based on further DHS guidance as well as further anticipated program adjustments.

Summary and Conclusion of Baseline Equipment Study

Through the baseline equipment list, the authorized equipment list was simplified by discipline and WMD response levels. Contractors worked with SMEs to develop lists; these lists will be continuously vetted through discipline groups. As stated previously, SMEs utilized the following documents to develop the lists: the 2005 DHS Authorized Equipment List (AEL), the DHS Universal Task List (UTL), the DHS Target Capabilities List (TCL), the DHS WMD Response Level Definitions, and any other documents related to the use of equipment for the various disciplines. As ND DES receives recommendations, the baseline equipment lists will be updated.

North Dakota Department of Emergency Services Considerations

These considerations were developed by ND DES with the goal of taking the information to the legislative advisory committee. They were developed based on the results of the anchor community and baseline equipment studies.

- Insert conceptual recommendations into ND State Homeland Security Strategic Plan, to include:
 - The formulation of ND anchor communities.
 - Streamlining emergency operations plan protocol.
- Investigate the distribution of Homeland Security equipment and training database.
- Develop multi-discipline based equipment committees to further refine equipment lists.
- Facilitate multi-jurisdictional training and exercises.
- Investigate statewide SWAT response concept for anchor community funding formula consideration.
- Continue to involve local disciplines in the development of anchor communities and Homeland Security initiatives.
- Distribute final product to emergency managers and response disciplines.
